Definitions

Students with learning support / special educational needs should be recognised as individuals who have strengths that can be nurtured and weaknesses that can be supported.

The statutory definition of “disability” in Section 2(1) of the Education Act 1998 is a follows:

- The total or partial loss of a person’s bodily or mental functions, including the loss of a part of the person’s body, or
- The presence in the body of organisms causing, or likely to cause, chronic disease or illness, or
- The malfunction, malformation or disfigurement of a part of a person’s body, or
- A condition or malfunction which results in a person learning differently from a person without the condition or malfunction, or

- A condition, illness or disease which affects a person’s thought process, perception of reality, emotions or judgement or which results in disturbed behaviour.

The statutory definition of “special education needs” in Section 2(1) of the Education Act 1988 is as follows:

“The educational needs of students who have a disability and the educational needs of exceptionally able students.”

In consideration of the statutory definition above The Centre considers a student as being in need of learning support if he / she: -

- Is recognised by the relevant professional personnel, as being in need of support.
- Is failing to achieve due to specific personal circumstances.
